The Legend Of The Piasa

Published By

JOHN RUSSELL IN 1836

No part of the United States, not even the highlands of the Hudson, can vie, in wild and romantic scenery, with the bluffs of Illinois on the Mississippi, between the mouths of the Missouri and Illinois rivers. On one side of the river, often at the water's edge, a perpendicular wall of rock rises to the height of some hundred feet. Generally on the opposite shore is a level bottom or prairie of several miles in extent, extending to a similar bluff that runs parallel with the river. One of these ranges commences at Alton and extends for many miles along the left bank of the Mississippi. In descending the river to Alton, the traveler will observe between that town and the mouth of the Illinois, a narrow ravine through which a small stream discharges its waters into the Mississippi. This stream is the Piasa. Its name is Indian, and signifies, in the Illini, The bird that devours men. Near the mouth of this stream, on the smooth and perpendicular face of the bluff, at an elevation which no human art can reach, is cut the figure of an enormous bird, with its wings extended. The animal which the figure represents was called by the Indians the Piasa. From this is derived the name of the stream.

The tradition of the Piasa is still current among the tribes of the Upper Mississippi, and those who have inhabited the valley of the Illinois, and is briefly this:

Many thousand moons before the arrival of the pale faces, when the great Magalonyx and Mastodon, whose bones are now dug up, were still living in the land of green prairies, there existed a bird of such dimensions that he could easily carry off in his talons a full grown deer. Having obtained a taste for human flesh, from that time he would prey on nothing else. He was artful as he was powerful, and would dart suddenly and unexpectedly upon an Indian, bear him off into one of the caves of the bluff, and devour him. Hundreds of warriors attempted for years to destroy him, but without success. Whole villages were nearly depopulated, and consternation spread through all the tribes of the Illini.

Such was the state of affairs when Ouatoga the great chief of the Illini, whose fame extended beyond the great lakes, separating himself from the rest of his tribe, fasted in solitude for the space of a whole moon, and prayed to the Great Spirit, the Master of Life, that he would protect his children from the Piasa.

On the last night of the fast the Great Spirit appeared to Ouatoga in a dream, and directed him to select twenty of his bravest warriors, each armed with a bow and poisoned arrows, and conceal themselves in a designated spot. Near the place of concealment another warrior was to stand in open view, as a victim for the Piasa, which they must shoot the instant he pounced upon his prey.

When the chief awoke in the morning, he thanked the Great Spirit, and returning to his tribe told them the vision. The warriors were quickly selected and placed in ambush as directed. Ouatoga offered himself as the victim. He was willing to die for his people. Placing himself in open view of the bluffs, he soon saw the Piasa perched on the cliff eyeing his prey. The chief drew up his manly form to his utmost height, and, planting his feet firmly upon the earth, he began to chant the death song of an Indian warrior. The moment after, the Piasa arose into the air, and as swift as a thunderbolt darted down on his victim. Scarcely had the horrid creature reached his prey before every bow was sprung, and every arrow was sent quivering to the feathers into his body. The Piasa uttered a fearful scream, that sounded far over the opposite side of the river, and expired. Ouatoga was unharmed. Not an arrow, not even the talons of the bird, had touched him. The Master of Life, in admiration of Ouatoga's deed, had held over him an invisible shield.

There was the wildest rejoicing among the Illini, and the brave chief was carried in triumph to the Council House where it was solemnly agreed that, in memory of the great event in their nation's history, the image of the Piasa should be engraved on the bluff.

Such is Indian tradition.

Chautauqua Activities

In presenting this 1937 program it has been the desire of the officers and committees to outline the season's activities in such a manner as to insure a worth while vacation to all who visit Chautauqua during the summer.

No one need have an idle moment while at this beautiful resort. Hiking trails lead over Sunset Bluff to Grafton and the confluence of the Illinois River with the mighty Mississippi, or over the Lover's Leap Bluff to the historic town of Elsah. These natural rock bluffs and trails are pictured in song and story and offer unlimited enchantment to all nature lovers.

Athletics play a prominent part in the season's program. Tennis, roque, swimming, baseball, horseshoe pitching, shuffle board, badminton and track meet events make the days all too short for those interested.

A playground for children, under competent supervision and direction of the Ladies' Civic Improvement Association, takes care of the younger boys and girls.

Horseback riding over valley paths, hill roads or in a newly constructed riding ring, with competent horsemen in charge, is available during the entire season.

Accommodations at the historic "Springs Hotel," operated under the direction of the L. C. I. A., and meals at the new Chautauqua Cafeteria, also board and rooms at reasonable rates are available always.

Cottages for rent can be arranged for at the Administration Office, subject to the approval of the Cottage Committee.

Music

Miss Eleanor Larsen, of Colton, California, will return from her studies at the Curtis Institute of Music as accompanist for the 1937 season. Her pleasing personality and artistic talent has won her many Chautauqua friends who will welcome her return.

Mr. Carrol Peters and his superb dance orchestra of Alton will delight the many visitors to Chautauqua each Saturday evening at the regular weekly dance, under the direction of the L. C. I. A.

The Association is gratified to announce the engagement of the Jerseyville Municipal Band for a series of concerts during July and August. Good music in the beautiful outdoors of Chautauqua awaits our friends and visitors on the days of the band concerts.
